Major Books

Our Mission

Major Books is an independent publishing company dedicated to bringing Vietnamese literature to the English-speaking world.

Our Vision

Our name, Major Books speaks as a clear, bold, and audacious resistance against the ‘minor’ status attributed to certain languages and their literature in the global publishing scene. Our hope is to contribute, no matter how little, to growing awareness that there are no ‘lesser’ voices in world literature.

Our Ethics

With the acute awareness of translation as an art form bearing immense potentials and challenges, our primary goal is to offer translations that are not only faithful but also true to the essence of the source book. Our translators, editors and illustrators, being mostly native speakers themselves, are committed to preserve the integrity and convey the originality of the author’s work.

We take immense pride in providing our authors, translators, and all stakeholders with fair and equitable compensation for their invaluable contributions, with the hope of fostering a thriving Vietnamese literature and creative ecosystems.

Our First Chapter

Between literary treasures that have been overlooked or worse, poorly translated, and brilliant pieces yet to be written, we will bring a curated selection of works from a variety of authors, periods, and genres. Ranging from critically acclaimed post-war fiction, national epic poetry, to contemporary LGBTQIA+ writings, we hope to present a well-rounded portrait of Vietnam and our diverse voices.

Water: A Chronicle

Biên sử nước

‘...a grimey, watery tale of the always-unexpected.’

– Khairani Barokka, author of amuk

Abstract

After an eight-year long hiatus, Nguyễn Ngọc Tư comes back with her second novel. Mesmerising, poignant, lyrical, existential, yet claustrophobic, Water: A Chronicle encapsulates the beauty of what contemporary Vietnamese writing has to offer.

At the heart of this watery ‘chronicle’ is a dual mystery: a holy man on an island empire, and a desperate mother seeking his heart to cure her child. The mosaic novel of nine stories circles this enigma like the river’s currents, carrying with it fragments of myth and life from the great river.

A trans woman who wants to be ‘whole’, a shadow bride who wants to be fleshed, a mad woman with a colicky infant, a words-eating woman shielding her child from a fly apocalypse... The ghosts and ghouls that reflect upon the water surface may well be the everyday reality of river life, or simply the universal haunting of womanhood.

The Author

NGUYỄN NGỌC TƯ, a talented and highly acclaimed female writer of the Vietnam Writers Association (Hội Nhà Văn Việt Nam), was born in 1976. With passion, she writes tirelessly and diligently. Her short story collection Cánh đồng bất tận (Endless Field) has received numerous awards, including the LiBeraturpreis Prize 2018. Other works of her have earned her the 2018 ASEAN Literature Award, and the 2024 Outstanding Southeast Asian Literature Award. She was listed by Forbes magazine as one of the Top 50 most influential women in Vietnam of 2018. Nguyễn Ngọc Tư's works have been translated into Korean, English, Swedish, and German.

Translated by

NGUYỄN AN LÝ lives in Hồ Chí Minh City. Her translations into Vietnamese include works by Margaret Atwood, Kazuo Ishiguro, J. L. Borges, Amos Oz, and the poetry in The Lord of the Rings. She won English PEN Translates Awards for Chinatown (Tilted Axis Press, 2022) and Elevator in Sài Gòn (Tilted Axis Press, 2024) by Thuận, and Water: A Chronicle (Major Books, 2024) by Nguyễn Ngọc Tư. Chinatown also won the 2023 ALTA National Translation Award in Prose and was the runner-up of the 2023 TA First Translation Prize. She co-founded and co-edits the independent online Zzz Review.

DEBORAH SMITH yearns to support and participate in literary cultures that are liberatory, not complicit in structures of violence. This desire informed her founding Tilted Axis Press and translating from Korean, but also subsequently quitting both. These days she is feeling her way tentatively, in the uneven rhythms and nonlinear trajectories of neurodivergent living. She is grateful for every opportunity to do this work relationally.

Making a Whore

Làm Đĩ

‘....an immediate and sharply observed modernist text.’

–Joshua Jones, author of Small Fires

Abstract

Heavily criticised upon publication and subsequently censored by the government, Making a Whore serves as a poignant defense for Huyền, its protagonist, deemed tainted by debauchery.

The novel follows the life of Huyền, a young woman born into Hà Nội's upper-class, whose innocent interest in her mother's pregnancy is kept at arm's length: 'You'll find out when you get married', so they say. Lacking sexual education from her family, Huyền turns to her peers for answers, opening up a world of childish whispers about physical pleasure.

As polite society demands Huyền to remain virtuous, she enters into adulthood with both the will to know and the will to suppress a young woman's burning physical desires. The torments of her sexual frustration spiral Huyền into a life of debauchery, one she might not ever want to turn back from.

The Author

VŨ TRỌNG PHỤNG (1912-1939) was a renowned Vietnamese writer and journalist, regarded as one of the most influential figures in twentieth century Vietnamese literature. In his short lifespan of 27 years, Vũ Trọng Phụng left an astonishing body of works across genres, from short story and novel to play and journalism. His writings are known for their bold and uncompromising portrayal of Vietnamese society under French colonial rule and for addressing taboo topics such as sexuality and sex work. Accused of ‘cultural damage’ due to the sexual content in his writings, he faced legal action, and his works were banned in the north of Vietnam, then nationally until the late 1980s.

The Tale of Kiều

Truyện Kiều

‘The Tale of Kiều is the encyclopedia of a thousand emotions.’

–Phan Ngọc, 2001

Abstract

A poetic classic that has captivated readers for generations is given a new life in Nguyễn Bình’s translation.

The Tale of Kiều by Nguyễn Du is a timeless poetic masterpiece, revered as one of the greatest classics in Vietnamese literature. Through Thuý Kiều’s years of wandering as a woman in 16th-century China, the epic delves into the complexities of human nature, gender, and sexuality.

With a new translation that is attentive to the folksy rhythms of the original form, and complete with detailed notes that position the original in its cultural context, The Tale of Kiều will appeal to lovers of a rich story, its couplets lingering and speaking to the most intimate of our human emotions.

The Author

NGUYỄN DU (1766-1820) was born in Hà Tĩnh Province, Vietnam. The son of a well-ranked family of elites, Nguyễn was well-versed in the Confucian classics, but his road to prosperity was cut short by a period of civil war, during which his village was burned, and he had to wander Vietnam in search of a new home. After peace was restored with the founding of the Nguyễn dynasty in 1802, he joined the royal court as an advisor to the Ministry of Rites, and later an ambassador to China. He died in Huế, the imperial capital, at the age of fifty-four.

While dynastical records depict him as a quiet, timid mandarin, Nguyễn Du's writings show a bold, vocal and emotional man, angered by systemic abuses of power and moved to tears by the sufferings of people, from soldiers fighting meaningless wars to sex workers dying in solitude. Through his inventive use of traditional forms, Nguyễn Du detailed the agonies of his world and asked why injustice was so rampant, sometimes calling on the Buddha to bring salvation to those who had been wronged.

Translated by

NGUYỄN BÌNH is a writer native to Hanoi, Vietnam. Born into a family of historians and anti-colonial revolutionaries, Bình grew up with a belief in literature as an art that depicts and confronts the conditions of society. Their literary works aim to connect ancient traditions and canons in order to motivate a look into what it is like to be human in the modern world.

Bình is the author of essays and poems in both Vietnamese and English, many of which have been published in magazines and anthologies in Vietnam and the United States. Currently, Bình is writing a novel, and completing the first Vietnamese translation of Vergil's Aeneid. They graduated from the University of Arizona in May 2023 with a BSc in Astronomy and BA in Linguistics, and are currently a PhD student in Astronomy at the University of Washington.

Parallels

Song Song

‘...a Wong Kar-wai movie of a novel: stylish and cool, erotic and yet touched with violence.’

–Anton Hur, Korean writer & translator, author of Toward Eternity

Abstract

Intense, complex and cinematic, this is the first gay novel from Vietnam to be available in the English language.

G.g, H, and Kan are young, and homosexual. They soon find themselves caught up in a ménage à trois that forces them to grapple with devastating consequences rooted in exploitation, scars and shames from their private pasts. Embedded in violence, insanity, betrayals, homoeroticism and surrealism, Parallels is a riveting account of how carnal and emotional traumas can determine how we love and hurt each other; an exquisite début that introduces readers to the astonishing gifts of Vũ Đình Giang’s imaginative power and distinctive style.

A hidden gem in contemporary Vietnamese literature, Parallels draws likely comparisons to pages of Alan Hollinghurst, Édouard Louis, and Garth Greenwell.

VISITING PAGODAS

At the start of the new year, Vietnamese families usually visit pagodas together. The pagoda gardens are lush and green, and visitors from all around come to pray. Everyone sincerely wishes for health, fortune and prosperity in the year ahead.

The curved roofs of ancient pagodas glow beneath the blossoms of spring.

At the pagoda, we should dress respectfully.

NORTH CENTRAL COAST

Stretching along the coast, the ancient capital of Huế is home to many unique Tết traditions. As the new year approaches, families carefully prepare incense, flowers, paper offerings, altar paintings, and a variety of festive foods – both vegetarian and savory – with thoughtfulness and grace.

The scent of burning incense fills the air, creating a warm yet solemn atmosphere.

PAPER OFFERINGS

During Tết, many families burn paper offerings – paper money and miniature versions of daily items – for the ghost and their loved ones who have passed away.

INCENSE

Incense is made from wood and aromatic herbs, which give off a fragrance when it is burnt. Incense has long held an important place in Vietnamese spiritual life.

FIVE-FLAY GOWN

First worn during the Tet Nguyen Giang, the five-part dress called áo ngũ thân (see page 104) has five flaps of fabric.

SINH VILLAGE PRINTING

These traditional prints from red and orange ink are used in worship and Tết offerings. One popular design shows an ox pulling a cart.

PAPER FLOWERS

Each year, families replace the paper flowers on their altar with new ones by Tết. The old flowers are respectfully.

MILLET SWEET SOUP

The taste of crunchy griddled rice crackers paired with smooth puréed millet has become something many kids love from the.

VEAL LOAF

A specialty of Hanoi in particular, giò lụa (see page 104) is made from meat and rice. If you can't find a lot of meat, try.

SOUP FERMENTED SHRIMP

As Tết nears in central Vietnam, soups complete without sour fermented shrimp become a highlight of festive pork belly.

SOUTH CENTRAL COAST

Tết in the South Central Coast glows with the golden hue of marigolds blooming in every street corner. The crisp year-end sea breeze carries their strong and earthy scent into even the tiniest alley.

CÁI HỒNG (PINK ROSE)

Made from white-puffed glutinous rice mixed with thick sugar syrup, cái hồng (see page 104) is a traditional sweet for Tet. It's wrapped in a piece of paper that has a small sign that Tết has arrived.

MARIGOLDS

For many, it is not just a flower but marigolds blooming on the veranda that capture the spirit of home. Marigolds can be grown in small pots or cut and placed on hanging baskets during Tết.

CHAMPA TRADITIONAL DRESS

The traditional dress of Cham women features a flowing skirt and a tight-fitting bodice decorated with intricate.

BOAT RACING FESTIVAL

Held each year on the second day of the lunar new year, the boat races take place on the Cà Mau River. The event features.

BÁNH TRỨNG (EGG CAKE)

Made from chicken egg and aromatic rice, bánh trứng (see page 104) is a traditional sweet for Tet. It's wrapped in a piece of paper that has a small sign that Tết has arrived.

BÁNH TÔ (RICE CAKE)

At the start of the first lunar month, families gather to try bánh tô (see page 104). The treat is made from glutinous rice flour.

SALTED PORK BELLY

Sticks of glistening, richly flavoured pork belly – marinated in fermented fish sauce – are wrapped with greens in rice.

CHÁ CÁ ĐÚ CÚ

A specialty of the Mekong Delta, chá cá đú (see page 104) is a traditional sweet for Tet. It's wrapped in a piece of paper that has a small sign that Tết has arrived.

WORSHIP

Our elders believe that besides shopping and preparation, Tết is also a time to show gratitude to our ancestors and the gods that have protected the family throughout the year.

LET'S clean up respectfully.

For safety, do not burn incense in a closed room.

WATCHING FIREWORKS

As fireworks light up the sky, people count down together to welcome the new year with new hopes and fresh feelings. Even strangers feel like friends, sharing warm wishes with one another.

Stay close to your parents so you won't get lost in the busy, bustling streets!

Let your thoughts dance with the sparkling fireworks.

Give Mom and Dad your best wishes – or a big, tight hug!

SOUTH EAST

Tết in the city feels a little stronger. The streets are usually quiet with the old closer to the city centre where all sorts of spring activities take place. Flower streets, book fairs, Tết-themed plays, and even a lot of folk art with Tết.

TÉT PLAYS

Tết is the most vibrant time for southern theatre troupes and old folk, and crowds gather like it's a festival.

THUỐC LEO (TET LEO) SWEETS

Made from peanuts or black sesame seeds, thuốc leo (see page 104) is a traditional sweet for Tet. It's wrapped in a piece of paper that has a small sign that Tết has arrived.

TÉT CANDIED FRUITS

One of the delights of Tết is the candied fruit (see page 104) or mứt Tết (mứt Tết offered to guests, and).

VEGETARIAN PEAST

Vegetarian dishes are not only delicious but also good for our digestion. They're known as a prelude for.

MILK STUFFED BITTER MELON SOUP

Local people believe that eating the soup during Tết (see page 104) will wash away the bad luck for the new year.

BRANISD PORK AND EGGS

The pork is tender enough to melt in your mouth, flavoured with the salty richness of coconut juice and fish sauce.

MILKELONS

A pair of fish, round and decorated with ribbons, red paper and calligraphy is always placed on the altar.

Treasury of Vietnamese Folk Tales

Kho tàng truyện cổ tích Việt Nam

by Nguyễn Đồng Chi

Translated by Nguyễn Bình & Lan Võ

Edited by Kim Trần

Illustrations by Jeet ZDung

Abstract

An enchanting collection of 11 Vietnamese folk tales from Vietnam's 'Andersen'.

The Treasury of Vietnamese Folk Tales series is the most complete and indispensable text collection when it comes to Vietnamese folk tales. Gathering over 200 stories from across the Vietnamese people of legends, fables, and moral parables, there is a tale for everyone. The stories in Volume 1, curated and translated by Major Books, shine a spotlight on the women of Vietnamese folklore—not damsels in distress, but as heroes, tricksters, warriors, and sometimes even villains. Their voices echo through tales that are bold, mysterious, and deeply human.

Each tale comes with hand-drawn illustrations by award-winning artist Jeet ZDung. Evoking the craftsmanship of folk Vietnamese artisans, each artwork offers a rich, immersive window into the spirit and texture of the past.

The Young Die Old

Những đứa trẻ chết già

by Nguyễn Bình Phương
Translated by Khải Q. Nguyễn
Edited by Joshua Black
Cover art by Dusse Bui

Abstract

Mysterious, unsettling, but darkly poetic, this magical realist novel echoes the timelessness of García Marquez and Faulkner.

Set in the mythic village of Phan, the novel follows a tangled web of characters haunted by buried secrets, ancestral curses, and an unnamed historical trauma. Two feuding families vie for control of a mysterious treasure said to lie beneath the land, while a former soldier wanders the village, driven by fractured memories, and unfulfilled desires. Time folds in on itself, and reality blurs with hallucination, as spirits, doppelgängers, and collective guilt haunt the living.

Like a fragmented but lyrical nightmare, Nguyễn Bình Phương evokes the disorientation of a society grappling with the aftershocks of war, repression, and silence. The title speaks to a generation whose youth was lost before it began—children who age prematurely under the weight of unspoken histories.

Dear Death

Thư Gửi Thần Chết

by Quỳnh Hương

Translated by Khuê Thi

Illustrations by Trúc Nhi Hoàng

Abstract

A sweet and nuanced exploration of difficult topics, through a young girl's letters sent to 'Death'.

Dear Death follows a young girl named Carrot. Was there anyone else in the whole wide world who felt as lonely as Carrot did? Most days, she could not talk to anyone or ask them any questions. And on such days, she would wish she could go to Death's place... to live there. However, the decision to move to another place was too big for a child. Carrot could not make up her mind right away. That's why every time she felt sad or hopeless, she would write a letter to Death. The book is a collection of all the letters Carrot sends to Death in the hopes her questions could be answered, when no one else would give her an answer. Carrot's questions are endless: what is real? What is love? Will Death...die? Dear Death is a gentle, thoughtful invitation to explore difficult subjects, such as loss, that young readers might want to ask about, but don't know where to start.

Crossroads and Lampposts

Những ngã tư và những cột đèn

Abstract

Winter 1954. Dưỡng, who deserted the failing anti-communist army, decides to hide at home, awaiting the pardon of the new communist government. Dưỡng's plan to remake his life is hindered by a gunshot fired from his garden: the first in a string of unfortunate events that involves him in a spiral of criminal and political cases.

Written in the early 1960s, the novel captures the vertigo experienced by many Vietnamese as the peace brought about by Điện Biên Phủ campaign's victory in 1954 proved to be short-lived. Once again, North Vietnamese were plunged into the state of war against the Republic of Vietnam (South Vietnam) and their American supporters. The novel not only sheds light on a little-understood yet crucial period in modern Vietnam but, above all, provides an extraordinary depiction of the universal human experience of navigating changes and searching for one's identity amidst turbulent times.

The Author

TRẦN DẦN (1926-1997) was an influential Vietnamese poet and writer known for revolutionising Vietnamese poetry through his innovations in both form and ideology. Though many of his works faced censorship and banning from 1960-1990, Trần Dần persevered in his literary pursuit throughout his life. The origins of Crossroads and Lampposts can be traced back to a project sponsored by the Hanoi Police Department in the early 1960s. The handwritten manuscript was completed in 1966 and submitted to the Police Department for review. The manuscript was kept by the Hanoi Police Department for 22 years, and took 45 years to reach readers. Trần Dần passed away in 1997 before the book was ever published.

In 2007, Trần Dần was posthumously awarded the prestigious National Prize for Literature and Arts, recognizing his significant creative legacy. During his lifetime, he received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Hanoi Writers Association.

A Stroll With Time

Dạo Bước Với Thời Gian

Selected in The White Raven's 2025 list of notable children's literature

Abstract

A poetic reflection on the passage of time through the lens of the nature and culture of Vietnam.

“Four stone dog figurines on a dresser come to life and follow the first-person narrator and a plant called »Time« on their walk through the four seasons. They observe peach blossoms drenched in spring rain, notice fresh shirts soaked with summer sweat, witness the blush of a blooming pomegranate in autumn, and realize that spring is about to return when the bare frangipani branches bloom in late winter. As the eternal cycle of life starts anew, the dogs turn back into stone. This elegiac poem weaves together symbol-filled depictions of Vietnam's nature, art, crafts, and architecture creating what feels like a series of colourful still-life paintings. At the end, readers are invited into a »time walk museum« where these details are explained.” (The White Ravens, 2025)

Childhood Field

Miền Thơ Ấu

by Vũ Thư Hiên | Children's Fiction

Considered a gem of Vietnamese children's literature.

Written over a period of 9 years since 1969 to 1976, during his incarceration at Hỏa Lò prison in Hanoi. The manuscript was completed in secrecy, written on scraps of paper which he then gave to his wife, and his family hand-copied each of the passages onto normal paper.

The story follows little Thư, a 7-year-old boy who, after his father was taken to prison for being involved in the revolution, had to live in the countryside with his devout Catholic aunt. Vũ Thư Hiên masterfully captures snapshots of countryside Vietnamese life during the 1940s, sharing stories of simple and mundane men and women, and how a child perceives the war that is happening around, and to, him.

Three Clouds Drifting Across Duckweed Land

Ba áng mây trôi dạt xứ bèo

by Nuage Rose Hồng Vân | Novel

An autofiction that started out as love letters to her own father, mother, and all the men and women who saved her throughout her childhood of being a refugee, running away from the bombardment of Hanoi during the 1960s. This book exists as a capsule preserving the memories of childhood for a generation of people who are still alive in Vietnam, till this day: a generation who grew up during the war and carried the task of rebuilding the tattered land that the previous generation laid down to protect.

Short story anthology by Lê Minh Khuê

by Lê Minh Khuê | Short stories

Lê Minh Khuê was born in 1949. She joined the National Youth Liberation Front in 1965. Before 1975, she wrote about the lives of soldiers fighting on the Trường Sơn path. Post 1975, she wrote about the changes in people and their consciousness during the post-war, building the nation, a period of looking forward. An underlying thread of trauma, while expertly veiled, permeates her writing.
